Tips to Overcome Personal Struggles and Achieve Goals

By StatePoint

When faced with tough challenges, it can be tempting to throw in the towel. But experts say knowing the power of goal-setting is fierce and discipline will help anyone overcome obstacles.

“Failure has the power to break you or it has the power to push you forward,” says Scout Bassett, a U.S. Paralympian in track and field. “Join our experiences as an opportunity to re-evaluate your goals and move forward from there.”

Bassett offers the following insights into goal-setting:

• “Progress” doesn’t always arrive with clear indications of what you need to do. As you start off her skills on a global stage and participating in Giants’ “StandForProgress” program to inspire all Americans to think about the progress they want to achieve in their lives.

Bassett offers the following insights into goal-setting.

Why Remember?

By Michael Armijo

I once read a story about a 9-year-old boy named Travis, whose mother died at home one day. Without telling a soul, little Travis covered her body with a coat and he placed sheets of notebook paper over her face. He learned to fix his own meals — mostly frozen pizza, cereal, and soup — cut his own hair, and attended school withoutfail. He did this for over a month because he was afraid he’d be placed into foster care if anyone found out his mother passed away. The mother’s body was eventually discovered by family friends. Travis begged them not to call the police.

When I read this story I was moved to write about it from my perspective. A friend asked me why I sought out areas in life that are so traumatic, so emotional, and so painful. He asked why I seemed to focus on elements of life that are painful, annoying, and disagreeable. He asked me “why remember?”

It amazes me what life brings it. You’re like an old, enormous tree sitting in your own yard. One day it catches your eye and you tell yourself, “I’ve never noticed that huge obstacle in front of me before.”

Although that tree has become a part of your daily routine, you never realized that you’ve had to go around it every day. You’re so busy trying to survive that the small detour has become a part of your daily routine.

I kind of feel that my emotions are like that tree. I’ve driven past them for so many years without really paying attention. I kept wondering why it took so long to get anything productive; why life was such a hassle for me. And then one day, for a reason only God may know, I noticed this tremendous obstruction in my life that I was going around and avoiding over and over again. As I fed up and decided I wasn’t going to go around anymore — I was going to drive right through that humongous tree.

It was never my plan to have to go and examine the landscape of my life. I thought I was supposed to follow the path that was laid out before me. But somewhere along the way, I developed a source of confidence that somehow convinced me that the path laid out before me was vulnerable to me. I realized through a series of gangland murders, I believed there are experiences in life that give you freedom and confidence, but sometimes you end up in a stagnant period where you have to take a moment to sit back and reflect. And during this reflection, you feel as if you’re AWOL. This helped raise Capone’s notoriety to a national level.

Among Capone’s enemies were “The Untouchables,” a team of Chicago police, who led a team of officers known as “The Untouchables” because they couldn’t be corruption. Ness and his men routinely broke up Capone’s bootlegging businesses, but it was Capone’s bootlegging businesses that finally staked and landed Capone in prison in 1931. Capone began serving his time at the U.S. Penitentiary in Atlanta, but amid accusations that he was manipulating the system and receiving cushy treatment, he was transferred to the maximum-security lockdown at Alcatraz Island, in California’s San Francisco Bay. He got out early in 1939 for good behavior, after spending his final year in prison in a hospital, suffering from syphilis. Plagued by health problems for the rest of his life, Capone died in 1947 at age 48 at his home in Palm Island, Florida.
Why Remember?

you’ve subconsciously watered those seeds and allowed them to grow into this enormous tree.

When you realize this, you get angry and resentful of your own carelessness and then you remember the selfish acts of ir responsible adults. You can’t change what has happened in your life, you can’t change these obstacles, those that have prevented you from going on with your life. It’s puzzling why we remember those horrid demons that have scarred our lives with darkness and pain. But, I have to ask myself: Why do I remember?

After asking myself that question I realized I had no answer. I then felt compelled to just let the darkness go and try to remember how great life really is. And although that huge and longstanding tree has strong roots that grow deep below the surface, the momentum I can carry uproot these life altering emotions and I can grow and love like many others.

And just like Travis, who used a few pieces of notebook paper to cover a painful sight, hoping that no one would discover it, we can ignore those chapters of our lives. This is why we must ask ourselves: “Why Remember?”

find a way forward from there. Most of us experience setbacks, disappointments and even failures sometimes, but ultimately those moments can be the greatest motivators.

• The biggest struggles you face may not be the ones handed to you by fate or outside forces. They may be the battles you fight within. Look past your own inner voice discouraging you from your hopes and dreams. Developing mental fortitude is a continuous process.

• You can’t change the past but you can help write the future. Embrace and focus on what you have gained, not what you have lost.

• Don’t let naysayers hinder your progress or cause you to lose faith in yourself. The beauty of being underestimated is that you have an opportunity to defy the odds. Use pessimism to motivate you.

• No one can do it alone, so don’t be afraid to rely on the help of others. Even at times when you don’t believe in yourself, there may be others who do.

Citi’s Stand for Progress program explores how all of us define progress, set goals, overcome obstacles and support and inspire others to do the same. Americans can share how they stand for progress by using #StandforProgress and posting their own goals on Twitter, Facebook or Instagram. Whether it’s eating healthier, saving money for a house, or spending more time with loved ones, it helps to clarify your goals by writing them down.

Artist Corner

Jaime Morales
aka Lazy

By Racine Guajardo

Jaime Morales aka Lazy has been professionally tattooing for about 16 years. He originally started in prison where he learned with a homemade tattoo machine. He started off wanting to get tattooed, which moved into him trying to practice on himself as well as his cell mate while he was incarcerated in Chino Youth Training School. As a three striker, Morales prayed that god would give him the ability to start a career as a tattoo artist saying, “I knew deep down in my heart that the ability was there. I just had to do my part in putting in the work. I realized that there’s no substitute for hard work.”

Morales has now been attending Victory Outreach for the past 13 years.

Tattooing for some is beyond just the art, Morales says, “I’ve always been an artist but I always had a desire to tattoo. By being in the business and having to manage myself at times has taught a lot of other things besides just tattooing. It has also taught me how to be a good listener, how to be patient, how to communicate with others outside of my own race.

There are so many different styles in tattooing, but Morales says, “I love to do black and grey art and portraits, especially since they are the most challenging to do.” When asked what makes him different from other tattoo artists, he states, “I am able to design you something from scratch and also my writing has won me multiple awards. It’s rare that you find an artist who can create from scratch and write well.”

Jaime Morales is now working at a shop in West Covina called Living Dreams Tattoo Shop. You can contact him on multiple social media accounts; Facebook: Jaime morales, e-mail: lazyr13@yahoo.com, Instagram: Mister_Untouchable and Snapchat: untouchable_lazy.

Elderly couple found dead in Walnut

Also according to Diamond Bar/Walnut Patch, “Coroner’s Assistant Chief Ed Winter identified the man as husband and wife. Investigators believe the husband shot his wife and then shot himself, Winter said.”

“I’m shocked,” said Valerie Guitron, who has lived in the neighborhood for 13 years. “I mean, that just doesn’t happen here.” She said she did not know the man and woman but was heartbroken for their relatives. “I’ve never seen this,” she added. “Our neighborhood is very, very quiet, so when I saw this I knew that something serious must have happened. It’s just sad with everything that’s going on in the world,” according to an interview conducted by ABC7.

The couple was pronounced dead at the scene. Further investigation is being done at this time.

What is the difference between organic and conventional produce?

A question from
Denny of Arrowhead
By Clark’s Nutrition

Organic food is regulated by the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) under the 2002 National Organics Program (NOP). This program defines the term ‘organic’ and provides the certification labeling and growing standards for organic foods. Organic foods are produced using conventional pesticides and fertilizers. These standards also state that organic foods shall not be processed using synthetic ingredients, sewage, sludge, bioengineered, or somthing radiation. Before labeling with the USDA organic seal a government-approved certifier inspects the farm where the food is grown to make sure the farmer is following the rules and guidelines set by the USDA Organics Program. When this is completed the use of the USDA ORGANIC seal is allowed for use on packaging.

A big concern for non-organic foods is the use of pesticides. The connection for pesticides and the long term health concerns for diseases like cancer have brought much attention to the use and overuse of pesticides. The USDA Pesticide Data Program (PPD) and Environmental Protections Agency (EPA) test foods for pesticide residues. The EPA suggests that 99% of all foods tested meet their criteria for safety. Foods are also tested on a random basis as well. GMO foods are foods that have been genetically modified. Simply put this means an apple’s genes or DNA have been manipulated with another plant or animal DNA, by piecing together strands to make a product with certain outcomes. A great illustration of this is found in Monsanto’s (now owned by Bayer Aspirin Co.) golden rice which has been manipulated to include vitamin A content, this being an advantage for vegetarian individuals. The biggest argument for GMO’s is less pesticide use and greater yield of foods for a growing world population. This argument has been greatly subdued since the New York Academy of Sciences (2016) reported that GMO’s have no greater yield as well. Additionally lower pesticide use was prevalent in the beginning but now is comparable to before GMO use according to the New York Academy of Sciences. GMO grown foods, seeds, or farming practices are not allowed in the NOP.

Finally how will you know if you are getting organic, conventional, or GMO fruits and vegetables when shopping? For fruits and vegetables a great advantage is the standard coding system in the grocery industry. This standard is based on what is called a Program Look Up (PLU) code (which has been in place since 1990). Although this is a voluntary program, almost all grocery and produce companies use this system. This code denotes a little sticker that is on individual pieces of fruits or vegetables. Of note, there are a few cool things about this system: These codes can be 4 or 5 digits. Four digits are for conventional and often start with the number 9. Organic codes are 5 digits and start with the number 9, while GMO foods have an 8 prefix number and a 5 digit system as well. There is also one other system that is present in helping to place your produce where you want it to be. This system is called Country of Origin Labeling (COOL) which was enacted in the United States around 2004. You will notice that there are stickers or signs on either your produce itself, (this also includes meat, poultry, fish and some nuts etc.) or the price sticker on the grocery shelf. A product that comes from outside of the United States can be organically grown but obviously the USDA NOP would not be able to completely certify farms outside of United States. So when shopping for your fruits and vegetables, please keep in mind all of these factors when making your decisions.

Depression

Do you seem to be always sleeping or not able to sleep at all? Are you eating less of the thing in sight or suffer from no appetite at all. Have you lost pleasure in doing the things that once made you so happy? Are you unable to focus and concentrate? If you are able to answer yes to the questions above you may be suffering from some form of depression.

Depression comes in many forms. Dysthymic Disorder is a very mild form of depression. People suffering from this are very functional but just don’t feel happy. The Worms Are Back

By Pastor Mark Hopper

This has been a long, hot summer. Recently, we have enjoyed cooler weather in Southern California, but the hot summer weather took a toll on my vegetable garden. The tomato plants produced very few tomatoes during the hot summer months. But, now the plants look better and there are more blossoms again. I hope we are in for a second harvest in the weeks ahead. But, there is a new adversary in the garden. Along with new green leaves and tiny new blossoms are some ugly, green worms. These green tomato worms have a large horn on their head. They blend in with the green leaves and are very hard to see. I am not sure where they come from or how they get into my garden, but I suspect that some butterfly’s may be responsible.

Two ways I can tell that the worms are back are the black droppings that they leave behind and the twigs that they have consumed. These ugly, green worms can devastate a healthy tomato very quickly. They must eat them off the branch they are eating and loss it and the worm in the trash. I have been vigilant, keeping an eye out for these determined adversities. It is man against nature. It seems like nature and the worms are winning. If you have had any success against these green tomato worms, please let me know. If you have a homemade or secret remedy, I would like to hear from you. Raising healthy tomatoes is more difficult than you think. The little seeds that I planted last spring have grown into big, healthy plants. They have survived the heat of summer and seem to be ready to produce a new crop. But, the worms are back - they seemed determined to prevail.

Pastor Mark Hopper is from the Evangelical Free Church of Diamond Bar, 3255 South Diamond Bar Blvd. Sunday services are 9 a.m. and 10:45 a.m. For more information, call (909) 594-7604 or visit Efreedub.org.

University Professor Gives Chino High Students Advice On Applying To College

By CVUSD

Chino High students with questions about the college application process recently received advice from Dr. Begona Echeverria, a University of California, Riverside professor. Dr. Echeverria met in the school library on Oct. 3 with about 75 students from Diana Murillo’s Advanced Placement math classes. Dr. Echeverria gave advice on college essays and offered to give free feedback to students who emailed their essay drafts to her. “She provided valuable insights into the admissions process and how (student) essays can make a difference in getting into our top colleges and universities,” Murillo said. Dr. Echeverria also talked about misconceptions some students have about top colleges, and reminded students not to rule those schools out when applying for higher education. “She attended Stanford University and spoke highly of the experience she had,” Murillo said. “She was not thinking of applying there until one of her teachers encouraged her. It changed her life.” Dr. Echeverria volunteers every year to talk to Murillo’s students, the Chino High math teacher said. ■

By WVUSD

Diamond Bar - The Diamond Bar High School Theatre Company begins its fall season with a performance of Mary Zimmerman’s Journey to the West. Tickets are $10 for students and $15 for adults. The show times are November 3-5, at 7 p.m. and November 6 at 4 p.m. in the Diamond Bar High School theater. Tickets may be purchased online at seatyourself.biz/dbhsdrama.

"Part vaudeville, part mystical dreamscape and Eastern-influenced ballet, Zimmerman’s meticulously choreographed production is a fabulous balancing act that stunningly juxtaposes the rambunctious energy and low comedy of a Wizard of Oz-like trip with the lyrical beauty of Chinese poetry and the mysterious revelations of a religious search." --Chicago Sun Times
